1938. The SS assembled a network of secret fortresses in South America to develop the most evolved and incredible scientific projects. The fight has only started. South America is the new battlefield for the achievement of the final victory of the Third Reich

Synopsis

In 1944 a mysteriously crashed pilot is sent to Doctor Edward Burton's hospital in Manaus, Brazil. A patient's strange ring awakens the curiosity of this North American doctor, who on his own will investigates the origin of the mystery.

In 1938 Helmut Langert, a successful German businessman in South America, receives from the very Reinhard Heydrich in Berlin the proposal of managing the SS's scientific military framework in that area of the world. Fourteen secret fortresses, strategically located in the Southern Cone, shape the SS bastion, led from the most significant one: Kolonie Waldner 555. The most evolved and incredible scientific projects are gathered on these fortresses, for the achievement of the final victory of the Third Reich.

It is a big responsibility, but Langert knows that his country needs the maximum effort of all and every one of his men. He works with the best scientists and military men from the SS, against the clock, because many South American countries have already been declaring war on Germany, and the area becomes very dangerous in the view of any German movement.

Biography

Felipe Botaya is, after having worked in several known multinational companies and worked in England and the Middle East, Professor and lecturer at several business universities and prestigious schools of both Spain and foreign countries, for several years now. His interest for little-known historical topics related to World War II led him to investigate the secret project to obtain the Ark of the Covenant. He shaped this investigation in Kronos, la puerta del tiempo, the result of years of research. He is also author of Antártida 1947 and Operación Hagen, works that together with Kronos and Kolonie Waldner 555 make up the Tecnología Nazi tetralogy.

Sales pitch

This is the first novel in Spanish which focuses its argument in the network of the Nazi strongholds built in Latin America, from 1938, to control their resources and raw materials.

It includes great abundance of data, details and has a meticulous atmosphere that gives credibility and realism to the argument, and immediately engages the reader.

It is the title that completes the tetralogy Tecnología Nazi, a collection of titles dedicated to the most striking episodes of World War II.
