Explorers, spies and undercover travelers in forbidden places
Accompany the explorers, spies and adventurers who, via secret mission or by personal challenge, toured the forbidden places in Asia (Mecca, Arabia, Central Asia, Tibet, Afghanistan and China), and live their fascinating and incredible adventures.

Synopsis

Secret Explorations in Asia will take you through the cities, regions and countries of this continent which, in some moments, were forbidden to foreigners - all the people from the West, or those of certain nationalities.

You can go with those who tried to disguise themselves or pretend to be of fake origins in order to travel incognito in such off-limit places like Makkah, the Middle East, Central Asia, Tibet, or certain regions of Afghanistan and China.

In addition to travelers or adventurers like Richard Francis Burton or Lawrence of Arabia, you will learn about many others that have gone unnoticed or not received their due recognition in the annals of history.

Fernando Ballano has a degree in psychology and a masters in contemporary history. He is the author of several guidebooks (Tanzania, Rwanda and Burundi; Zanzibar; Poland) and regularly collaborates with media outlets specializing in travel and history. Sales pitch

Following the paths of previous adventurers who managed to travel incognito, this work transports the reader to forbidden countries, regions and cities such as Afghanistan, Tibet or China. In so doing, the book offers a comprehensive geographic and historical tour in off-limit places within the Asian continent.

The book looks at travelers and explorers such as Richard Francis Burton or Lawrence of Arabia, whose stories and journeys are not as known as one would first believe. Many of the journeys covered in this book are being published in the Spanish language for the first time.

The adventure of each traveler is accompanied with a route map and lots of illustrations.

This title combines discovery and adventure to produce an exciting book that will delight readers.
